Caetano de Almeida

Eleven Rivington has mounted a two-venue exhibition by Brazilian artist Caetano de Almeida, who weaves threads of color to create dazzling grids.

The repetitive patterns are opened up by white circular cutouts that push the colorful strings apart, creating new, unexpected rhythm in the composition.

In the largest painting a maze of thin lines makes the New York subway system look like a kindergarten project. Some of the lines penetrate the white circles, turning them into crosshatched suns floating amid euphoric chaos.

Prices are $30,000 to $60,000. Through Oct. 13 at 195
